Get to know NICC!

Paul Hebler

Hi everyone, my name is Paul Hebler, I am 27 years old and I come from Mainz, in Germany. I have lived up north in Leeuwarden for the last two and a half years, where I started my studies in International Leisure & Events Management. For the current semester I got the opportunity to choose a minor and stumbled over the course Development Cooperation & Globalisation at De Haagse Hogeschool. My interest in the subject brought me to Den Haag and ultimately to the NICC.

For the upcoming year, which marks the 75th anniversary of Dutch development cooperation, the NICC is planning various events, which gives me the perfect opportunity to combine my two fields of study. I am mainly working on the creation and organisation of those events, and am already excited for their execution.

What I value most about my internship at the NICC, is the contact with people who have a lot of experience in an international working environment and getting to hear their stories and anecdotes from all over the world.

WHATS NEW?

PHOTO COLLECTIONS

The NICC Foundation gathers and archives parts of private photo collections of people directly involved in Dutch international cooperation. Some of these photos are already on show at our location in The Hague. Others will now be published on our website, in the form of Photo Collections. The first ones are already up right now. You can check them out here!

Africa Day in Amsterdam

On the 18th of November the Foundation Max van der Stoel organized the annual AfricaDag at Pakhuis de Zwijger in Amsterdam. The NICC Foundation has been present with an Info-stand.

On this infostand, we got the opportunity to discuss the work of the NICC with people interested in Africa and Climate Justice, this year's theme. Throughout the day, workshops were organized on this theme, with special attention for sustainable and equal partnership between Africa and Europe, African voices on adaptation and mitigation, and African practices that Europe could learn from. Because of the strong speakers presenting this topic, ranging from Dutch politicians to African activists, there was a lot of inspiration to be taken away for the future of international cooperation. Former minister Jan Pronk, for instance, suggested that because of the history of international cooperation, international cooperation of the future should be seen as reparation payments from the global North to the global South. This, of course, was the topic for a lot of heavy debates during the rest of the day. What became clear, however, is that to emphasize the importance of remembering the history of international cooperation, the NICC can be of huge value.
