Meet the presenters

Chrisje Sandelowsky: The discourse around global citizenship is currently most explicit in the educational realm. The discourse in the Netherlands, however, competes with a political reality that is increasingly critical of it. Moreover, citizenship as enshrined in Dutch law promotes an inward looking kind of citizenship. My research looks at how the discourse on global citizenship holds strong within these challenges.

Win Thiri: This research traces the history of cooperation between the Netherlands and Myanmar in the water sector. It explores how the Netherlands water cooperation had navigated through the political fluctuations in Myanmar.

Robin Hids: Use of language in development cooperation has undergone significant changes in the last 75 years. This research will analyse how language has changed and how this influenced our perception of development cooperation.

Rick Robben: This study investigates the history of the concept of climate justice and how international policy and development ideas have transformed in time towards climate justice. A specific focus is the interplay between governmental institutes and NGOs.

Emile Kwa: There has been a recent trend in development cooperation to work with local communities and indigenous knowledges. This research looks to investigate how Dutch NGOs integrate indigenous knowledge systems into their food security programmes.

Matthijs Leesmans: This case study examines the Kali-Konto project. A cooperation between multiple Dutch and Indonesian actors for the development of the Brantas river basin

Help to create a sustainable future and write history!

OUR MISSION The NICC Foundation helps create a sustainable future in which the past counts! Recording and sharing the history of international cooperation for sustainable development ensures that experiences, knowledge and stories are not lost and can therefore remain an important source of inspiration for the future.

As a young foundation, we do everything on a voluntary basis. We are therefore dependent on funds and donations in terms of income. That's why we ask you to become a friend of NICC! By supporting us financially, we can realize what we stand for and you help write history!

Knowledge
