

"For a future inspired by the past and its stories"

Meet the newest members of our team at NICC!

Hi everyone! My name is Suzanne van der Neut and I recently joined NICC as a volunteer. I have a bachelor's degree in European Studies and recently completed my master's degree Euroculture: European Politics, Culture, and Society in a Global Context. Here, I mainly focused on the EU's green agenda, particularly regarding the agricultural sector, as well as social movements, and EU-Latin America relations. My thesis examined the 2019 Dutch farmers' protests, analysing the political context and mobilising resources that enabled the protests. So far, I have been working on backing up the Gender Timelines, but I am excited to get more involved in making the timelines as well. I look forward to meeting you all, exchanging ideas, and contributing to sharing the knowledge we have at NICC in an engaging and meaningful way!

Hi! My name is McKenna Rae Dibble, you can call me Rae. I am currently a junior lecturer at the University of Amsterdam in the Political Science department, though I also enjoy editing and writing on the side. My academic background is a combination of migration studies, world history, and international literary studies. My own research has focused on the use of archives and historical documents in contemporary fiction. I am excited to join the communications team as a volunteer to keep thinking about the ways in which we communicate and engage people in history and politics!

Hello, my name is Stanley and I am originally from London. I have always aimed to use my research and History background to build narratives that empower marginalised groups and fight for a more equal world. From doing my Bachelor Thesis on postcolonial communities in modern France, to my Master Thesis which I did on the collective memory of the Mau Mau rebellion in Kenya, decolonialism, migration and cultural change are topics that really interest me. I am looking forward to bringing my perspective to the NICC and working with interesting colleagues here to complete the Kenya Timeline. I look forward to hearing from everyone and sharing our knowledge!

Do not miss out!

Webinar "Seeing Development Through Generations: Gender, Photography & Dialogue"

What will we discuss and explore?

Building on our previous webinar in November 2024, where Robin Hids explored the evolving language of development cooperation, we now turn our attention to the importance of (gender) terminology and how glossaries and terminologies are always evolving, never a finished project. We will present our updated Gender Glossary and reflect on the numerous dynamics that can determine which terms or descriptions might be included or excluded from key policy documents, resolutions, and smaller documents, such as glossaries. In presenting our updates and the discussions that led to these modifications, we aim to provide insights on how to further make your development and international cooperation projects, yet likewise perceptions of the world, more (gender) inclusive.

Following this, we invite you to participate in an interactive discussion that centers on the role of photography in development work. We will present images taken by members of Stichting NICC during their fieldwork, encouraging you to reflect on what these photographs evoke. What emotions or associations arise for you when you view them? How might your perspective differ from others in the webinar?

Let's be curious and interactive!

When?

You are warmly invited to join us on February 21st from 12:00 to 13:00 for the webinar, "Seeing Development Through Generations: Gender, Photography & Dialogue."

How?

Send an e-mail to event@stichtingnicc.nl. Once signed up, you will receive a short questionnaire about one picture. We would greatly appreciate it if you could take a moment to fill this in! This will help us gather some insights beforehand and make the discussion and interactions easier to start.

Engage with our social media!

We are excited to continue sharing our work, documents, archives, and footage with the wider community! If you support our mission and the important work we do, we encourage you to engage with us on social media and help spread the word about Stichting NICC. Share our resources with students, organizations, schools, universities, and anyone who could benefit from our content. Your support helps us reach more people and further our impact!

Keep building community and networks with us as we prepare for and anticipate changing political climates that support thriving, healthy transnational communities, where international cooperation and mutual learning processes inspire all of us.
